TOP HOMES, SUPERLATIVE ARCHITECTS

I love my job, especially when preparing our annual Top Homes issue, a unique collection of the most spectacular and exclusive oceanfront properties currently on the market in the United States. This year's choices are breathtaking on so many levels – location, architecture, interiors and landscapes – and the last word in luxury coastal lifestyles (page 80). Speaking of exceptional homes and the people who create them, I was delighted to meet Steven Ehrlich and his design firm partner Takashi Yanai at the recent American Institute of Architects' annual convention in Atlanta. Los Angeles-based Ehrlich Architects won the annual Architecture Firm of the Year Award, and we featured one of their remarkable homes in our Platinum List 2015 issue last month. Superlative architects, such as Ehrlich and Yanai, are the foundation stones of Ocean Home, and I look forward to showcasing more work by them – and many other world-class designers – in future issues.

CONVENTIONAL WISDOM

Between editions, I had the pleasure of attending the 2015 Annual Convention of the American Institute of Architects at Atlanta's Georgia World Congress Center. With a fascinating keynote speech by former U.S. President Bill Clinton, the four-day event attracted more than 700 exhibitors and thousands of leading architects from around the world, including luminaries such as Moshe Safdie, Tom Kundig, Peter Bohlin and Frank Harmon. If the caliber of talent at the expo is any barometer, the future of architecture in America is in very safe hands. aia.org

A DESIGN DISCOVERY

As the editor of a leading luxury coastal lifestyle magazine, I'm constantly searching for design ideas and inspiration. One of my most recent discoveries is World of Architecture, a stylish and engrossing blog showcasing some of the best residential architecture and interior design around the world. Founded by Dino Vabec, an intuitive design graduate in Croatia, the online resource is brimming with must-see homes – many of them coastal – which will have you clicking and scrolling for hours. worldofarchi.com

THE ROYAL FAMILY

Our annual search for the best oceanfront homes currently on the market in America always delivers an array of magnificent mansions, and this year's jewel in the crown is nothing short of a palace. Fronting 465 feet of Atlantic Ocean on Hillsboro Beach, Fla., the spectacular Le Palais Royal offers 60,000 square feet of unbridled opulence, including a private boat dock for a 185-foot yacht, and is listed for $139 million by leading Coldwell Banker broker William PD Pierce. It's not actually the most expensive home on the market (sources say a Palm Beach, Fla., estate is being offered quietly for just under $200 million), but it's certainly the most palatial. Our royal family of ocean homes (page 80 and online at oceanhomemag.com) is a dazzling showcase of real estate and the essence of luxury coastal living.

A RARE FIND

It's not every day that a private island – within sight of the bright lights of New York City – comes on the market, but Tavern Island is one of those rare finds. Located on Rowayton Harbor, Conn., an hour's drive from downtown Manhattan, this stunning three-and-a-half-acre romantic estate features a 6,000-square-foot main house, boathouse, caretaker's house dating back to the 1700s, tea house, two boats, a swimming pool, private beach and 360-degree views. Rich in history, this unique island was first inhabited by European settlers in 1651, witnessed the British invasion of Norwalk during the Revolutionary War, and housed author Lillian Hellman in 1938 as she finished her classic The Little Foxes. As rumor has it, Tavern served as a setting for many famous parties given by its then owner and legendary showman Billy Rose, who entertained guests like Marilyn Monroe and Barbra Streisand. Listed for $10,995,000 by Rick Higgins, CEO of Higgins Group/Christie's International Real Estate.

A BEAUTIFUL FRONT DOOR SETS THE TONE FOR YOUR ENTIRE HOME

words by Melissa C. Gillespie

1 | Pop of Color

Give your door and trim a luxurious look by using rich, vivid colors. Aura Grand Entrance by Benjamin Moore cures to a lustrous, elegant finish. Door shown in Crete Countryside and trimmed with Snowfall White OC-118, both in a satin finish. benjaminmoore.com

2 | Peaceful Serenity

Blend your front door with the natural surroundings. This stunning in-swing white birch wood door, custom-made by Architectural Millwork, is in harmony with both the architecture and the calm coastal waterway. archmillwork.com

3 | Beauty and Brawn

Nantucket Island is stunning yet steadfast in the Atlantic's harsh coastal weather, and the Nantucket Collection by Simpson Door Company expresses that same resilient beauty. Solid yet stylish, this door makes a bold statement on any ocean home. simpsondoor.com

4 | Let the Light Shine In

The design of your door can also impact your home's interior entry. Choosing a front door with a glass window, like this JELD-WEN IWP Aurora Custom Fiberglass Exterior Door in mahogany, allows more natural light into the space. jeld-wen.com

5 | Looks So Real

Want the look of wood without all the pesky maintenance? Choose a realistic prefinished wood-grain fiberglass door. The Pella Architect Series is lined in oak with an optional mahogany frame – giving the illusion of a solid wood door. Shown in mahogany grain with wood grilles. pella.com

A Taste of Summer

A NEW BOOK OFFERS DELICIOUS RECIPES AND MENUS FOR CASUAL OUTDOOR ENTERTAINING

words by Karina Antenucci

Entertaining in the summertime should be a labor of love, not laborious. The sultry days and evenings are a time to enjoy the alfresco gatherings of family and friends while serving up the fruits of the season. Fresh everything – from the catch of the day to summer’s delectable produce – is the name of the hosting game at this time of year.

To help home chefs prepare for company, Swedish veteran cookbook author and television chef Lisa Lemke dishes up laid-back menus that are anything but humdrum in her latest cookbook, The Summer Table.

“For me, summertime is the highpoint of the year when it comes to fresh produce. It feels like something new is ready to be harvested everyday,” says Lemke, who lives in a small town on the west coast of Sweden, where she regularly appears as a food expert on a popular Swedish morning show.

In her fifth cookbook, Lemke makes organizing meals for entertaining easy by creating 11 delicious and simply prepared menus for a variety of occasions.

Her Lazy Days at the Beach Buffet includes eight recipes, such as melon tricolore with olives, basil and mint; steak sandwiches with horseradish mayo; and strawberry semifreddo cones with biscotti streusel.

A Getaway Picnic serves up carrot and coconut soup; cheddar biscuits with roasted onion; and crispy hoisin chicken. Additionally, useful chapters are dedicated to marinades, rubs, sauces and salsas.

As for one of the author’s favorite tastes of summer? “My strawberry and grappa sorbet is a super dessert on a really hot day,” she says.

THE DETAILS

Published by Sterling Epicure, $24.95, available from Barnes & Noble.

The Summer Table sets

the scene for easy, relaxed cooking with quality fresh produce and for having fun both in the kitchen and at the dinner table – or on a beach blanket. O|H

The top table

RECIPE

MELON TRICOLORE WITH OLIVES, BASIL AND MINT

My melon salad with salted olives and fresh herbs is so refreshing after a day on the beach. You can mix it up with different types of melon, but it looks and tastes just as good with only one variety.

- 2 1/4 pounds melon (with rind)
- 7 ounces (about 1 1/4 cups) kalamata olives
- 2/3 cup shredded basil
- 2/3 cup shredded mint
- 3 tablespoons freshly squeezed lemon juice
- 3 tablespoons olive oil
- Salt and black pepper

Cut the rind from the melon and remove any seeds. Cut the melon into small pieces (or use a small melon baller) and let them drain for a short while on a tray lined with a clean kitchen paper towel. Combine the melon with the rest of the ingredients in a bowl. Serve the salad at room temperature or slightly chilled. Makes 6.

Strikingly different
The beach home's box-like design is in stark contrast to the more traditional architecture of its nearest neighbors.

The owners of this striking coastal home knew exactly what they did not want when they began thinking about building a Hamptons beach house on the south shore of Long Island, N.Y.

"There are a lot of architectural styles in the Hamptons, including many Shingle Style houses," explains Andrew Plumb, principal at Aamodt Plumb Architects of Cambridge, Mass. "The clients pointed to them and said, 'We want the opposite of that.'"

Nestled on a narrow barrier island, with dramatic exposures to the Atlantic Ocean and Shinnecock Bay, the resulting family vacation home is a 7,000-square-foot, three-level contemporary structure that has won industry accolades, including an award for design excellence from the Boston Society of Architects.

The prestigious American Institute of Architects Center for Emerging Professionals in Washington, D.C., also selected the design for display.

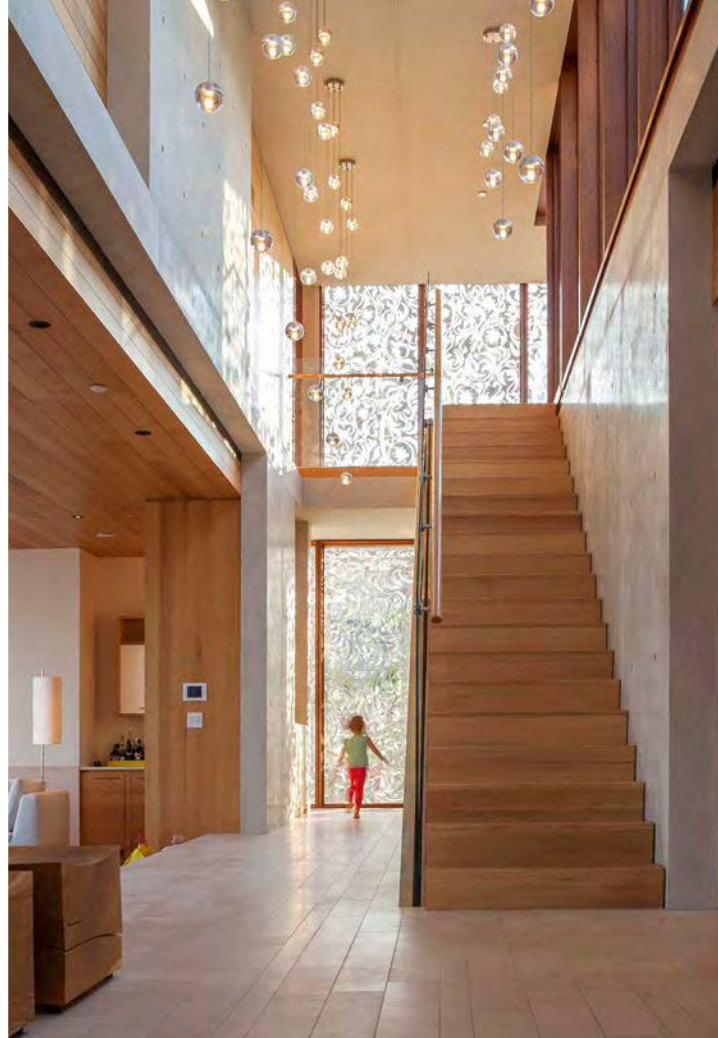

"Creating this house was like making a finely tailored suit," Plumb says. "It's an organic thing that grew out of conversations with the clients, and it's modern in the sense that it's of today, related to contemporary living."

The environmentally sensitive site, flanked by sand dunes and the beach on one side and a salt marsh on the other, presented a number of design and building challenges.

The flood plain location dictated breakaway walls on the ground level, and local building codes required hurricane-proof structures. "The site is also very corrosive, it's always in the sea air," Plumb adds.

His plan, developed with his wife and architectural partner Mette Aamodt, places the house on concrete pilings that lift all but the garage above the flood plain. Concrete also forms the bones of the house itself.

"Concrete is durable," says Plumb, "but there's also a beautiful relationship between the concrete and the beach. Sand is used to make concrete and it's locally sourced, so the home's building material is rooted in context. It's both structural and a finish material, not hidden and clad in another material."

The concrete on the home's exterior has a rough texture that resists signs of weather damage, while interior walls wear a smooth finish. Some interior spaces, like the living room, have floors and ceilings sheathed in red oak.

To screen the interior from flanking neighbors and provide wind and storm protection, the architects devised a singular solution – pierced metal screens – which allow sunlight to flood in from the east and west while delivering privacy and shelter to the home's large windows.

The screens perform another service. Throughout the day, they cast ever-changing patterns of light onto interior walls, floors and ceilings, giving the rooms a unique and beautiful decorative complexity.

The main living area, a 500-square-foot space incorporating a dining area and kitchen, is squarely oriented towards the beach. It opens to a wide deck that becomes a continuation of the interior with sliding doors that make the walls disappear.

A custom trellis with a retractable awning acts as an extension of the ceiling plane. At the edge of the deck – beyond an outdoor kitchen, grill, dining and lounging space – is a long and narrow swimming pool, its color echoing the hues of the expansive sky and ocean.

"The shape and size of the pool are those of the glass on that elevation," the architect explains.

A dramatic, two-story stair hall occupies the center of the house, with the large living room on one side and a family room and guest suite on the other.

The second-floor family bedrooms include a master suite, which features a sitting room and sybaritic bath, and three additional bedrooms on the other side of the central hall.

Hidden on the second story is one of this home's unique features – a garden composed of limestone pavers interspersed with sedums and other hardy species.

"It's a green roof, open to the sky," Plumb says. "In a house where all the other spaces are geared towards the ocean view, it's an intimate, contemplative place."

The home's thoughtful and compelling design has paid off, not just in terms of garnered awards and family happiness.

Just after the house was completed, Hurricane Sandy roared up the East Coast.

DISTINCTLY DOREVE

ARCHITECT DOREVE NICHOLAEFF TAKES A BOLD APPROACH TO HER SIGNATURE COASTAL HOMES

words by Jennifer Sperry

Doreve Nicholaeff embraces “bold.” Whether she’s ramping up a home’s geometry with curves or straight lines or reawakening stalwart New England traditions with modern tenets, she abstracts from the past to create the new.

“I do tend to make bold moves,” admits Nicholaeff, whose signature homes dot some of Cape Cod’s most prestigious neighborhoods, including Osterville, where Nicholaeff Architecture + Design is headquartered.

“When working within a certain vernacular, I believe in studying and understanding the existing architecture, and then pushing beyond it,” she adds. Local materials and methods of exacting craftsmanship complement this process.

Whether designing a shingled Cape Cod beauty or a crisp, contemporary Rhode Island retreat, Nicholaeff conceives of each residence as a three-dimensional whole, taking into account not just interior elements but the continuous interaction of structure and landscape.

"When I approach a project, I think about the composition of the home within the land and their geometry," explains the architect. "I am very passionate about how the pieces fit together and how they relate spatially. Each room and landscape is intended to evoke a special emotion. To me, that's the epitome of architecture: feeling good in your surroundings."

Before launching her own firm in 1986, Nicholaeff studied architecture at the University of Witwatersrand in Johannesburg and continued her education at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where she earned a Master of Architecture degree in Advanced Studies.

Specializing in architectural history, theory and criticism, Nicholaeff found herself drawn to practicing her subject matter rather than merely studying it.

Working for a series of prestigious firms in Boston and Los Angeles gained her valuable experience in both planning and commercial projects.

Establishing her own firm and focusing on residential design has given her the opportunity to work very closely with clients. Nicholaeff loves the process of working with her clients from inception to completion. "There is such a joy in creating a design solution," she says.

This talented architect has transformed some of the coast's more enviable properties into summer retreats. The completed residences, ranging in location from New England to Florida and abroad, speak for themselves, fulfilling their owners' lifestyles while impressing from every angle.

Her distinctive stamp is apparent in a recently completed estate in Harwich, Mass., overlooking Wychmere Harbor. The project called for the design of a new main home, guest home and pool house.

While the prioritization of tradition was warranted – not only to accommodate the owners' tastes but also the neighborhood's aesthetic – Nicholaeff pushed for cleaner, simpler design elements when possible. "The exterior is traditional, but the interior is much more modern and open than expected," she says.

In conceptualizing the 4,000-square-foot main home, she decided on a courtyard-style layout, with two symmetrical wings reaching towards the harbor in an angled formation. This geometry assures maximized water views but also intricately connects the interior living spaces with the outdoor landscape beyond.

At the base of the angles is the kitchen. "The owners wanted the kitchen to be central; everything radiates from it. It's literally the heart of the house," says Nicholaeff.

The cupola-topped, two-story space receives natural light from above and opens to the dining room on one side and the family room on the other.

Centered on the angles, the pool stretches back towards the property's rear, away from the busy road. Just as the main home embraces harbor views, the pool house similarly embraces the pool while creating privacy to the rear.

The perfect hangout spot, the pool house contains an open-air lounge area, complete with stone fireplace, and two covered wings for a hammock and dining table.

It also provides shelter for grilling and a bathroom for a post-swim shower. Meanwhile, the pool's terrace connects to an adjacent tennis court.

PEARLS OF WISDOM

A REVOLUTIONARY ORGANIC LAWN SEED OFFERS HOMEOWNERS LUSH GREEN GRASS YEAR ROUND

words by Andrea Collins

Looking forward to planting your new coastal home lawn next spring? Think again.

“Most people think spring is the best time to plant,” says Jackson Madnick, an award-winning environmental water and energy conservation expert and the creator of Pearl’s Premium, a low-maintenance and chemical-free lawn seed offering year-round lush green grass.

“If you plant in spring, the new shoots can’t hold their own against invasive summer weeds,” says Madnick. “If you plant a new lawn or overseed your existing lawn in fall, the seed benefits from warm days and cool nights, fall rain and moisture, and is mature by the following summer and can defend itself better against weeds.”

According to the Environmental Protection Agency, homeowners spend 40 hours per year mowing their lawns, use large amounts of chemicals and spend half their yearly water bill on lawn irrigation.

Pearl’s Premium, based in Wayland, Mass., aims to change these troubling statistics with its breakthrough fourth-generation lawn seed that is redefining the way people grow and maintain their lawns, especially in harsher coastal climates.

“Ten years of intense research, with support from four of America’s top turf scientists, have resulted in a mix of the best native and adaptive seeds that grows much slower and develops much deeper roots than other grasses,” says Madnick.

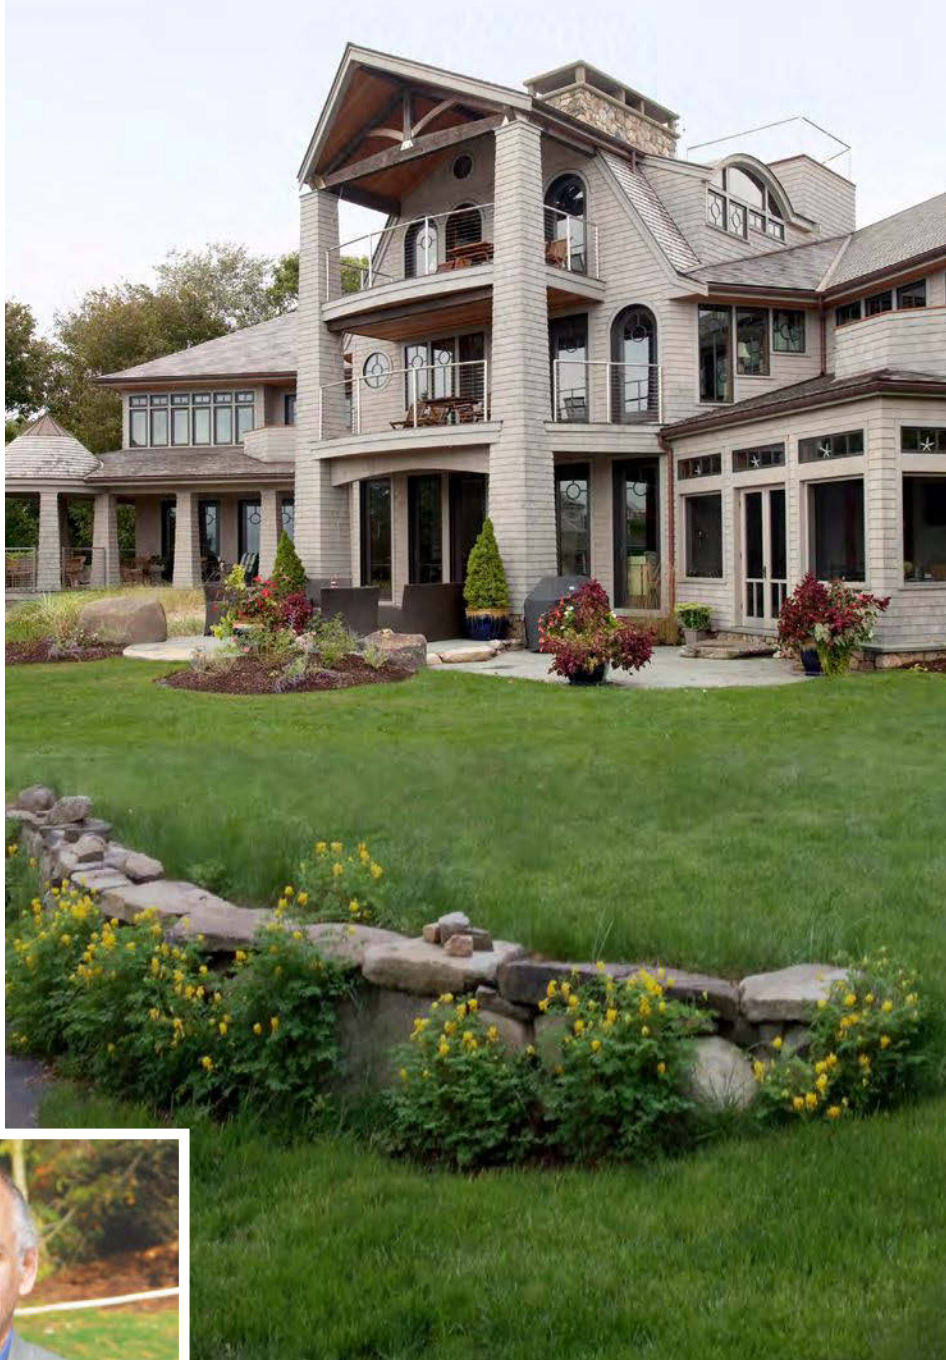

“Our eco-friendly grass is so low-maintenance that it requires 75 percent less water than other grasses, never needs chemicals, stays green all year and requires mowing only once a month or less.”

The seed’s roots, extending 12 to 14 inches deep, tap into naturally occurring moisture and nutrients to minimize watering, stop erosion and help the lawn tolerate drought and salt better than other grasses.

Inspired by his mother, Pearl, and her lifelong commitment to the environment, Madnick says his lawn seed not only saves people time, money and water but also addresses global concerns about water, health and climate change.

REACH FOR THE SKY

FLORIDA'S LAUDERDALE-BY-THE-SEA USHERS IN A CHIC NEW WATERFRONT TOWNHOME COMMUNITY

words by Julia Johnson

The classic real estate adage – location, location, location – is one of the foundation stones of an exciting and stylish new waterfront townhome community in Florida's Fort Lauderdale.

Located in Lauderdale-by-the-Sea, the city's trend-setting beachside community, and surrounded by some of the most coveted real estate in America, SKY230 offers the opportunity to buy into a unique coastal community at a surprisingly affordable price.

With direct water frontage at 230 Shore Court, the master-planned community features only 29 three-story townhomes along with a fourth-floor rooftop terrace offering dramatic ocean, intracoastal and city views.

Ranging in size from 3,000 to 4,500 square feet, and priced from $1 million to $2.2 million, the contemporary townhomes include spacious balconies on every level, energy efficient smart-home technology throughout, and four-level elevators.

"This new community is a fitting neighbor to the multimillion-dollar homes and condominiums in Fort Lauderdale," says SKY230 marketing manager Lauren Schmid. "With architecture reminiscent of South Beach Miami and a prime location between the Intracoastal Waterway and the beach, SKY230 offers a stylish and sophisticated lifestyle in a relaxed coastal setting."

Just 15 minutes' drive from Fort Lauderdale International Airport, and 45 minutes from Miami International Airport, the new community offers the best of urban and beach living with shopping, dining, green spaces and convenient transportation all close by.

Comprising four bedrooms and four-and-a-half baths, each townhome comes with contemporary interiors by Miami's design guru Steven G; fully furnished Steven G designer units are also available.

Kitchens feature quartz countertops and custom Sub-Zero and Wolf appliances; the bathrooms have a modern European design aesthetic, while blue mirrored and UV repellent impact windows keep the townhomes cool, light and airy.

SKY230 also offers 24 private boats docks on its waterfront seawall, catering to both the recreational and avid boating enthusiast, while a nearby marina offers berths and on-board supplies for larger yachts.

Each townhome comes with a two-car garage, and everything in Lauderdale-by-the-Sea is within easy reach by electric golf cart, a popular way for residents to get around town. OH

The sky's the limit

SURPRISE PACKAGE

A BAYSIDE BOUTIQUE HOTEL IN SAN FRANCISCO OFFERS AN ARRAY OF UNEXPECTED SURPRISES

words by Andrew Conway

In a world-class city, perched on an iconic bay and awash with scores of high-end hotels, it's a surprise to discover that Hotel Vitale is the only waterfront luxury boutique hotel in San Francisco.

Located across the road from the landmark Ferry Building, at the intersection of Mission Street and the Embarcadero, this outstanding 200-room hotel delivers spectacular views of San Francisco Bay and the imposing Bay Bridge.

Its exclusive bayside location and panoramic vistas, however, are just two of the many pleasant surprises awaiting guests at this contemporary urban retreat.

Unique circular suites, terrace studios, a penthouse-level spa set in a tranquil bamboo garden, and a stylish restaurant sourcing produce from the neighboring Ferry Plaza Farmers' Market combine to make Hotel Vitale a standout among San Francisco hotels.

The least surprising aspect of Hotel Vitale is that it's part of a collection of upscale hotels across the United States operating under the brand Joie de Vivre, a name celebrating the joy of life and all it entails.

This inherent sensibility seems to flow throughout the hotel, from the welcoming, efficient and helpful staff at the reception desk to the 14 categories of rooms and suites, the whisper-quiet Spa Vitale and popular Americano Restaurant & Bar at street level.

While all of the rooms deliver contemporary and comfortable accommodations, with neutral color palettes, limestone bathrooms and honor bars, this is definitely a hotel to consider upgrading to one of the spacious terrace studios, circular suites or terrace suites, all with wonderful views of San Francisco Bay.

Instant relaxation can be found in the hushed confines of Spa Vitale, an intimate and soothing haven of pampering on the penthouse level. Treat yourself to the spa's signature Bathing Ritual, a leisurely affair enjoyed in one of two outdoor soaking tubs set in a rooftop bamboo garden.

Under the direction of executive chef Josh Perez, Hotel Vitale's Americano Restaurant & Bar offers a sophisticated menu of cocktails, small plates and seasonal Italian cuisine served in a circular lounge, adjacent indoor dining room or on an outdoor patio.

For more information, visit hotelvitale.com.

The hotel is an easy walk or cab ride to many of the city's best attractions, shops and restaurants, assuming you can tear yourself away from those surprisingly good views of bay and bridge. OH

INTERIOR INTUITION

LEADING DESIGNER EDWARD LOBRANO TURNED HIS PASSION INTO A STELLAR 25-YEAR CAREER

words by Mary Grauerholz

Art and soul
Interior designer Edward Lobrano marries tradition with artful details in this chic home in the Bahamas.

Tapping intuition can be a thorny inner journey. But once the connection is made, it is worth its weight in gold. Edward Lobrano, the celebrated interior designer and former senior designer for Bunny Williams, was a successful business executive for many years – including a stint as a vice president of a leading brokerage firm at the age of 28 – when he suddenly jumped ship in his early 40s and followed his inner voice to a career creating artful rooms.

Today, Lobrano's stellar 25-year career is evidenced by a long list of private clients, both in the United States and abroad. "In interior design, I think you either get it, or you don't. I get it," he says with understated aplomb.

Lobrano designs are impeccably timeless. "I think a house done 10 years ago should look like it was done yesterday," remarks the New York City-based designer, a member of the Design Leadership Network, a community of interior designers, architects, landscape designers and construction managers who are among the highest-producing professionals in their industries.

He elaborates with his pink sport coat story: "You wear the coat to the first cocktail party, and everybody says, 'Wow, that's terrific.' The second time, they say, 'There's that sport coat; we love that sport coat.' By the third time, they say, 'Oh no, here he comes again in that pink sport coat!'" Lobrano laughs. "A great room should get better with age, not tiresome with age."

Timeless design, he insists, doesn't have to equate with money. "There are great things in inexpensive product lines," he says, noting that he has shopped in Restoration Hardware and purchased beds from Pottery Barn and repainted them. "It's about choosing the right things from those lines that have a certain level and look of quality."

Whatever the client's budget, a meeting of the minds can make all the difference. One of Lobrano's recent projects, a plantation-style house in Nassau in the Bahamas for a couple with a small daughter, is a perfect example.

"We communicated well," Lobrano says of his clients, who are originally from Toronto. "That's how you do great design, with clients who are willing to take a chance and spend the time to talk with you. That's the key."

Masterful work
Edward Lobrano, above, has forged a stellar 25-year career creating stylish interiors.

While the house is on the ocean, the couple didn't want a traditional beach house. This home is their main residence, so, as Lobrano says, "it needed to be casual but still dressed up, serious but not overly formal."

The clients, though, had their own ideas about tone. "He's very traditional, she is much more edgy and part of my job is to make everyone happy," says Lobrano, who loves pushing boundaries to find a happy middle point. "I'm always looking for a challenge. That's what makes this business fun."

By marrying tradition with artful details, Lobrano has created a masterful work in the Nassau house. Every room in the two-story, 19,000-square-foot residence, designed by the late James Carmo of the Palm Beach, Fla., firm of Bridges, Marsh & Associates, is an experience of quiet fascination.

With soaring 22-foot ceilings, French plaster wall finishes, creamy colors and classic touches such as coquina stone door surrounds, this is a space to sink into. Amid the tranquility of the living room, raw silk drapes in soft aqua add a shot of color. Unexpected pieces – a large custom-made shell mirror, an 18th-century Italian chandelier and a cream-colored, brown-flecked rug by Stark – draw the eye.

In similar fashion, the entry hall is decorated with imposing – and somewhat offbeat pieces – including an antique Karabagh Caucasian rug, sourced from New York City's renowned Beauvais Carpets, and a gilded bronze chandelier by the artist-designer Hervé Van der Straeten.

"I love quirkiness," Lobrano says. "Rooms should be a little quirky and layered. They have to be interesting, not static."

Lobrano's nontraditional approach fits with his core beliefs; after all, it takes a brave spirit to walk away from a thriving career. When Lobrano left the business world, he was enjoying success as the vice president of a real estate syndication company.

"I was very good at it, and I liked it," he says. "But I wasn't passionate about it. I love furniture and I love antiques. I came home from work and didn't read real estate magazines; I read home magazines."

He credits the late Antony Childs – the acclaimed neoclassicist interior designer who lived in Washington, D.C., and Lobrano's friend – with leading him towards a career in design.

THE DETAILS
For more information, visit edwardlobrano.com.

Childs surely must have appreciated Lobrano's eagerness to embrace a new path to creativity. As Lobrano sums up his own view of life: "Learn everything you can, and see as much as you can see." OH

EDGE OF THE OCEAN

AN HISTORIC MANSION ON CAPE COD DELIVERS A QUINTESSENTIAL NEW ENGLAND EXPERIENCE

words by Mary Grauerholz

The night is beautiful and mild, with Cape Cod Bay blanketed under a midnight blue sky, punctuated by the lights from a lone fishing boat. A beach bonfire crackles nearby, warming our toes.

Cocooned in the stillness and listening to the ocean lap at the shoreline – s'mores in one hand, a glass of wine in the other – I'm as happy as a clam.

The bonfire, built for us on a secluded beach, is one of many fun activities offered by Ocean Edge Resort & Golf Club in Brewster, Mass. This perfect night is the start of a three-day panacea for a group of friends, challenging us to let everything go.

Whether you come for nature or nurture, a weekend getaway or longer vacation, this delightful retreat delivers a quintessential New England experience.

Nestled in the inner elbow of the geographical arm that is Cape Cod, the 429-acre resort is surrounded by natural beauty, with plenty of room to roam. A private bayside beach offers warmer water than the open ocean and – with west-facing views – an ideal sunset vantage point.

At Ocean Edge, you can be as busy as desired, breaking a sweat in one of the many sporting activities or meandering lazily through the day like a summer breeze.

Many guests come here for the resort's private Nicklaus Design golf course (the only one on the Cape), driving range and putting green. For a more rousing workout, consider hitting one of the 11 tennis courts or taking a dip in one of five swimming pools.

Brand new this year is the Blueberry Pond freshwater activity center for kayaking and paddle-boarding, while a special children's program has plenty of options to keep little ones happy.

For an outdoor pastime that's as fun as it is intriguing, try a croquet lesson on the Mansion's rolling front lawn, or consider exploring on a bicycle from the resort's new

When it's time to retreat to your room, there are lots of options. Families and other small groups are drawn to the Presidential Bay Collection, a cluster of 31 two- and three-bedroom villas. Recently renovated, they include a gourmet-stocked fridge, handy washer/dryer facilities and concierge service.

The resort's 90 guestrooms, also newly renovated, are quiet and luxurious, with appealing, classic décor. Mansion-side rooms and the Presidential Bay Collection offer deep bathtubs. Most rooms and villas have a small balcony, the perfect spot for sipping a morning coffee or sundowner cocktail.

Ocean Edge's centerpiece is the iconic Mansion, the Nickerson family's former summer home and the hub of many resort offerings.

The gracious 1912 architectural beauty showcases the former home's history with old photos, mementos, and – new this year – a docent who leads complimentary tours.

Whether you're in one of the AAA Four Diamond-rated Mansion-side rooms or a villa in the Presidential Bay Collection, you are just a short stroll from the beach.

While there are excellent restaurants nearby, opting for an Ocean Edge lunch or dinner is a must. Downstairs is Bayzo's Pub, with stonework from the Mansion's early days and the ambience of an English tavern. Another informal setting is the Linx Tavern off the golf green.

For dinner, consider the Mansion's three indoor dining rooms, where the home's history is on full display. For dinner with a view, try the open-air Ocean Terrace bar adjacent to the Mansion.

For the ultimate in local fare, don't miss the new Bay to Table program, which includes oysters harvested from the Ocean Edge beach and a new pale ale created for the resort by Cape Cod Brewery.

A guided stroll on the beach's Brewster Flats leads to a working oyster farm where the shellfish is harvested, just one of the new experiences the resort is introducing this summer. OH

A GLASS ACT

A TALENTED ARTIST CREATES OCEAN-INSPIRED CUSTOM MOSAICS IN GLASS, STONE AND METAL

words by J. Michael Welton

Sara Baldwin is into theater – literally and figuratively. The 49-year-old owner of New Ravenna Mosaics, located at Exmore on Virginia’s Eastern Shore, is renovating a 1938 Art Deco movie theater in downtown Exmore.

She’s transforming it from genteel shabbiness to a first-class office and showroom. “Instead of a theater for movies, it’s a theater for mosaics,” she says. “Instead of posters on the front, there are big Deco mosaics, larger than life.”

Baldwin bought the theater in 1998 for $27,000 and is just now getting around to working on 1,500 of its 9,000 square feet. To elicit the biggest bang for her buck, she’s cladding its exterior in black granite and installing a projection system to present videos to her clients.

New Ravenna is a going concern these days, offering 500 mosaic patterns and an infinite number of designs in its 250-page catalog – many with a breezy coastal design aesthetic that is perfect for ocean homes.

“We use stone, glass and metal, and everything is made to order,” Baldwin says. “We’ve also started to import some mosaics that we call ready-to-ship; these make up 20 percent of our business now.”

Every year, New Ravenna purchases tons of stone, glass and metal from nearly every corner of the globe and transforms them into acres of mosaics that fulfill tens of thousands of individual jobs.

The glass is American-made, shipped in from factories in Washington and West Virginia. Gold and silver leaf are imported from Italy, while bronze is sourced from various parts of the United States.

Intricately patterned and carefully assembled by trained artisans, the completed mosaics grace pools, baths, kitchens, foyers, fireplace surrounds and feature walls worldwide. The smallest project to date is one square foot of tile for a shower niche; the largest is for a casino in Kansas City, Mo.

“In one pattern, the stone is from 12 different countries, with little bits of different places coming together and ending up in a bathroom as souvenirs,” says Baldwin.

After getting her start in the late 1980s at the University of Pennsylvania, where she studied painting, Baldwin struggled with the direction it was taking her. She found she was attracted to the functional, rather than the cerebral. “I wanted to create something more practical,” she says.

In 1990, she walked into New York City’s iconic Metropolitan Museum of Art and came across a black-and-white Roman stone mosaic in a pattern of waves, with a figure at its center.

"Something clicked – I had my 'aha!' moment – and I wondered if anyone made mosaics anymore," she says. "I decided that if nobody was, I was going to learn how to do it myself."

So she did, first researching and developing a graduate thesis on the topic, then writing a business plan. Back on the Eastern Shore, her parents agreed to back her for a year. She visited tradeshow with her mosaics and then she got her first order – for a $6,000 project – which she and her sister fulfilled.

"We thought we were in heaven," recalls Baldwin. "We hired our first employee in 1992, and she worked with us for 20 years until she retired two years ago."

The company grew every year afterwards and now employs 115 people. But it's not growth that New Ravenna hangs its hat upon. High style, instead, is its calling card.

THE DETAILS

"Every designer sees the world through a unique filter and our filter is influenced by the wonders of nature," says Baldwin. "Earth and trees and sky and ocean – the building blocks of nature – that's what it all boils down to for me."

And where other designers align themselves with a single style – traditional or modern, understated or glam – New Ravenna tackles them all. Baldwin looks at mosaics as a medium, comparing her work to a painting. "It can be applied in any sort of style of building," she says. "It's very versatile."

Though she's not the only one working in the medium today – she says Miami's renowned Art Basel was jam-packed with mosaics last year – she still commands the leading edge for design and materials.

Take, for example, her newest collection, Sea Glass, inspired by the colorful glass that has drifted and churned in the ocean for centuries, eventually eroding to a texture that's soft and reflective.

"The glass gets tossed and turned and striated by the sand, salt and water," she says. "The older it is, the more beautiful it gets – like wine that ages gracefully." Which serves as a metaphor, too, for New Ravenna Mosaics. OLH

A VINTAGE IDEA

A RAPIDLY EXPANDING FAMILY SPARKS THE IDEA FOR A COLLECTION OF VINTAGE PORCH SWINGS

words by Mary Grauerholz

If porches could talk, what stories they could tell. Whether a heart-to-heart chat or a golden moment of solitude, some of life's great memories begin on a porch – especially when it's outfitted with a cozy swing.

Vintage Porch Swings, located outside Charleston on Johns Island, S.C., has graced hundreds of porches and patios – as well as interiors – with swings comfortable and plush enough for sleeping.

The swings are handcrafted in a range of decorative styles, including contemporary and shabby chic, and are hand-finished with paint or stain by artisans.

It was a business born of need – the mother of all needs, you might say. Seven years ago, Krista and Brent McHenry were parents of twins and a baby, and Krista was pregnant again.

She was in dire need of a place to lounge with the children and, as she says, “I selfishly needed a place just to go alone and swing.

“It started as a honey-do thing,” adds Krista, who designed a swing bed and asked Brent to make it. She loved it, and soon neighbors were noticing the creation and asking for one.

Today, the McHenrys operate their business from a warehouse-shop space near their South Carolina home, in quintessential Low Country, while Brent continues his work as a biostatistician.

The swings are even more important for this rapidly expanding clan, with seven children aged from two to 11 (including two sets of identical twin girls) and yet another baby on the way.

They act as sanctuaries, particularly on the family's screened porch overlooking picturesque Bohicket River.

Built in cypress or other woods upon request, the swings are named after the McHenry children, such as the Joshua, which hangs from nautical ropes. Wrought-iron hangers are also an option.

SPECIAL PROMOTION | REAL ESTATE

A PERSONAL SERVICE

If you're searching for a classic New England waterfront property, Macdonald & Wood Sotheby's International Realty (SIR) will deliver your dream home.

"Our innovative team of highly successful professionals is dedicated to providing each and every client with personalized service," says owner Donna Wood (above).

Of the 1,200-plus real estate offices in Plymouth County, Mass., Macdonald & Wood SIR currently (2015 to date) ranks #12 in dollar volume with an astute team of seven agents working diligently to share their knowledge of the South Shore community and marketplace.

Particularly noteworthy is the office holds one-third of the current real estate inventory in Duxbury, making it the go-to company whether you're buying or selling a home.

"Right now the market is very strong," says Wood. "Inventory is on the increase and buyers are feeling much more confident about the economy and making decisions quickly.

"Real estate feeds our economy in so many ways; it's kind of the center of the circle," she adds. "And when real estate is moving, the plumbers are busy, Lowe's is selling things, people are buying fabric and rugs and it really resonates throughout the economy."

Three of Macdonald & Wood SIR premier properties include a distinctive waterfront home (326 Powder Point Avenue) on coveted Powder Point, listed for $5,499,900; a landmark home at 151 King Caesar Road, also on Powder Point, listed for $3,350,000; and a beautiful Duxbury Bay home at 230 Marshall Street, listed for $2,950,000. macdonaldwoodsir.com

LONDON TO A TEA

THE CLASSIC BRITISH TRADITION OF AFTERNOON TEA IS A HIGHLIGHT OF THE ICONIC RITZ LONDON

words by Andrew Conway

It is, quite literally, a feast for the eyes as a small army of neatly pressed waiters delivers tea stand after tea stand heaped with freshly cut finger sandwiches, warm baked scones with clotted Devonshire cream and strawberry preserve, and a mouthwatering array of cakes and pastries.

Polished silver pots of coffee and loose-leaf tea, bearing regal names like Ritz Royal English, Lapsang Souchong Imperial and Darjeeling First Flush, are poured into delicate china cups.

The elegant Palm Court, with its mirrored panels, marbled columns, gilded trellises and central glass ceiling, echoes with idle chatter as well-heeled guests catch up with family and friends.

Welcome to Afternoon Tea at The Ritz London, a classic British tradition in a quintessential British hotel, located in Piccadilly next to the leafy expanse of Green Park.

With its French chateau-style architecture, Louis XVI furnishings and Edwardian ambience, The Ritz delivers a grand and stately setting for this delicious ritual.

The Palm Court is a centerpiece of the Long Gallery, an architectural masterwork extending the length of the hotel from the entrance lobby at one end to the resplendent Ritz Restaurant at the other.

With the Afternoon Tea service offered in five sessions daily from 11.30 a.m. to 7.30 p.m., it's not uncommon for visitors to spend all day at the hotel, moving from cocktails in the late 1920s-inspired Rivoli Bar to Afternoon Tea in the Palm Court and dinner in the restaurant.

A vision in soft pink, pale green and white, with glittering chandeliers, floor-to-ceiling windows and a terrace overlooking Green Park, The Ritz Restaurant is an iconic London venue for dining in style.

The lavish Louis XVI décor extends to all 136 guest rooms, including 24 suites, skillfully blending antique furnishings with modern comforts and technologies.

The signature Piccadilly, Royal and Prince of Wales suites naturally come with the service of a full-time Ritz

Butler, who can take care of everything from unpacking to restaurant reservations.

Be aware, the Afternoon Tea service is hugely popular. Reservations should be made well in advance and a formal dress code of jacket and tie for gentlemen applies in the Palm Court. The Ritz really is London to a tea. OH

THE NEWEST OCEANFRONT RESIDENTIAL DEVELOPMENTS FROM FLORIDA TO MEXICO

words by Melissa C. Gillespie

VieVage Los Cabos, a new luxury beachfront hotel and residential villa resort in Mexico's Chileno Bay, has released its first-phase villas for purchase. Part of the rapidly growing Auberge Resorts Collection, VieVage Los Cabos will comprise a 28-room boutique resort and 32 contemporary three- and four-bedroom beach villas, priced from $1.6 million. Designed by Glazier Le Architecture and interiors firm BAMO, the low-profile villas maximize indoor-outdoor living with a southern California design style. Mark Cooley, partner of SV Capital Partners, says the development is on schedule for an October 2016 opening. vievagecabos.com

A fortunate few now have the opportunity to own an oceanfront home at The Cloister Ocean Residences at Sea Island Resort in Georgia with the release of a limited remaining inventory of residences. The 22 furnished one-, two- and three-bedroom residences range from 1,104 to 3,102 square feet, and are priced from $425,000 to $1.1 million for a one-quarter deeded ownership. "It's a smart way to own and enjoy the best of Sea Island, with all the amenities and benefits of a five-star resort and none of the worries of maintaining a vacation home – all at a fraction of the initial and ongoing costs," says project director Randy Burgess. cloisteroceanresidences.com

Real estate development firm Irongate has broken ground on the second tower of The Ritz-Carlton Residences, Waikiki Beach and launched the luxury residential community's final phase of sales. The development is approaching 90 percent sold out since it hit the market in the summer of 2013. The final phase includes a collection of studio, one-, two- and three-bedroom residences priced from $949,800 to $3.5 million, as well as a handful of penthouse estates priced from $6.75 million to $25 million. theresidenceswaikiki.com

Windsor, a private residential community in Vero Beach, Fla., has launched the sales of its Windsor Park Residences. Designed by Merrill, Pastor & Colgan

Architects, the development will feature a collection of 12 residences within five connected buildings. Six floor plans, sized from 2,980 to 3,940 square feet, feature three to five bedrooms. Amenities include a beach club, golf course, putting green, gun club, equestrian center, polo field and tennis courts. Prices range from $1.7 million to $2.3 million. windsorflorida.com

If you're looking for an intimate but beautiful New England coastal community, Seaside Village in Niantic, Conn., may be just the ticket. Residential options include spacious townhome-style condominiums with open floor plans, granite countertops, hardwood floors and custom details. Prices start from $220,000. seasideniantic.com OLH

california LIVING

California's breezy oceanfront lifestyle is the envy of the world. This special Ocean Home promotion showcases an array of the best real estate experts, private homes and design products capturing the essence of luxury coastal living.

COASTAL HAVEN

True to Form.

This La Jolla retreat was designed to meld modern lines with beach house comforts. Located just a block to the ocean's edge in La Jolla's Upper Hermosa neighborhood, this home was built from the ground up within the last 2 years. The architecture and design offer a distinctive twist on classic coastal design by incorporating timeless finishes with livable spaces that create a beach escape that is as stylish as it is comfortable. As you enter through the gate of the residence, the grounds offer a welcoming air that sets the tone for what this home offers: a beach retreat where family and friends can gather and relax, and take advantage of the temperate year-round climate of San Diego.

Designed to maximize the ocean views and indoor/outdoor living, the nearly 3000 sq. ft, 4 bedroom, 4 bath main house and 1BR/1BA nearly 500 sq. ft. guest apartment feature space rarely available this close to the beach. At the heart of the home is a great room with French doors that open to a covered patio creating both formal and al fresco dining and living room experiences. The gourmet kitchen features a work/gathering island that is highlighted by a leathered finished granite countertop and European cabinets that create a smart, stylish flair.

The family/media room upstairs is highlighted by commercial grade 8 foot - 4 panel sliding doors that open to a covered balcony. You will relax in comfort while enjoying views to the sparkling Pacific Ocean and the sounds of the waves crashing against the coastline.

The grounds offer a complete resort experience including a 3-hole putting green, 5 unique sitting areas, a resort-sized 9 ft. spa featuring a Pentair wireless remote system with color changing intellibrite lights, a fire and water feature surrounded by a built-in bar area, and an outdoor shower. The landscaping is water friendly and low maintenance.

The guest apartment is located above the oversized detached two-car garage. Your guests will be smitten with the 360 degree views from the roof deck and feel like royalty staying in the 1 bedroom, 1 bath ocean view apartment.

This coastal residence makes a bold, lasting statement about SoCal breezy living and what it means to be part of the coastal community of La Jolla.

This property is offered for sale at $2,978,000 and is represented by Michelle Serafini and Rosa Buettner with Coldwell Banker Previews International in La Jolla, CA. Contact them for detailed information on this property at 888.851.LJPB (5572) or at www.5808LaJollaHermosa.com.

OPEN SPACES

Enhance your lifestyle with LaCantina's innovative folding and sliding door systems.

Wide, open spaces in a home can actually make it seem as though you've increased your square footage. Innovative folding and sliding door systems not only allow for more natural light and air to flow in and liven up your interior, they also create new spacious areas for entertaining.

Located in Oceanside, California, LaCantina Doors is a leader in designing and manufacturing large door systems that offer innovation, performance, quality, and value. With a comprehensive range of folding, multi slide, and swing doors, a perfect match exists for all openings.

Minimal, clean designs along with LaCantina's signature narrow stile and rail profile create door panels with symmetry and balance, allowing for more glass and natural light. Each door system comes standard with Low-E dual-glazed glass for energy efficiency and is NFRC rated.

Folding doors offer a variety of both design and performance options, including an aluminum thermally controlled system that provides optimal thermal performance against cold and hot climates. A new class of multi slide combines the preferred features of high-end lift slide door systems, such as performance, strength, and symmetry, with the functionality and value of a multi slide. Swing doors are wider, taller, and more robust than typical single or French doors.

LaCantina's latest innovation, Contemporary Clad, is available across their entire product range. Complementing any architectural style and all window packages, Contemporary Clad features contemporary aluminum styling with the warmth of a wood interior. Additionally, Contemporary Clad is LaCantina's most energy efficient, with U-values complying with the recent energy code changes to Title 24.

If you are ready to create open spaces to enhance your lifestyle, then you can contact LaCantina Doors, Inc. for more information.

SEWARD JOHNSON IN NEW YORK

Selections from the Retrospective

"Seward Johnson in New York, Selections from the Retrospective," an exhibition of eighteen sculptures highlighting three series of figurative life-size bronze sculptures will be on display this summer in New York City. The public installation – the latest in the Garment District Alliance's 'Summer Art on the Plazas' series – will captivate New Yorkers and visitors alike with its sculptures' astonishing, life-like presence along Broadway.

Created by renowned American realist Seward Johnson, the sculptures will be on view along the pedestrian plazas on Broadway from 36th to 41st streets through September 15th. Previously exhibited across the globe, Johnson's three series of sculptures – Icons Revisited, Celebrating the Familiar and Beyond the Frame – will make their first-ever appearance together in New York City for this historic installation.

Seward Johnson turned his talents to the medium of sculpture fifty years ago. Today there are more than 450 life-size cast bronze works featured in city parks and museums worldwide including in London, Paris, Rome, Madrid, Kiev, Sydney, and Osaka. Johnson was first heralded for his "man on the street" works, which reflect our daily lives. His renderings of iconic images, both life-size and monumental, invite viewers to examine as well as celebrate our history and culture. The sculptor's Beyond the Frame series offers the intriguing experience of interacting with the figures from famous Impressionist masterpieces.

At 85, Seward Johnson continues to significantly enhance the urban and suburban landscape, and to potentially influence the world of public art.

WATERFRONT

It's the only word that matters when talking about Southern California's most exclusive homes.

When it comes to luxury properties situated directly on the waterfront, it's everything! That's exactly the premise behind Waterfront Collection, one of the most distinctive realty groups in Southern California. This boutique agency is led by Stephen Sutherland, a renowned real estate professional with a background as a leading designer and developer of high end international resorts, residents and estates. His real estate vision is built on one singular focus: to only serve properties directly on the water, be it ocean, bay or harbor. If it's just "near" the waterfront or in close proximity, Waterfront Collection won't represent the home. It's exactly this singularity that has propelled this company to its premier status, with an incredible network of world-wide buyers and resources that other agents and realty companies simply can't match.

Yet, when it comes to the highly desired homes along Southern California's stunning coastline, there is one other word that cannot be denied: "luxury." These are the types of homes that people aspire to live in and they represent the pinnacle of achievement. So when it comes to selling one of these immaculate properties, an average real estate agent will never suffice. Waterfront Collection was designed to serve only Southern California's most elite clientele and the distinctive luxury waterfront residences in which they live.

This unwavering specialization in waterfront real estate is key to the success of Stephen and Waterfront Collection. It takes something truly distinctive and desirable to make the cut. When it does, you can expect only the best in real estate representation to ensure your property sells to the right buyer looking for a gorgeous waterfront home like yours. For more information or to schedule a no-obligation listing consultation for your home, call Stephen at 949.278.3052 and discover what he and Waterfront Collection can do for you.

THING TO DO
AT ONE&ONLY
OCEAN CLUB
BAHAMAS, AND THAT'S SURRENDER
TO ITS RAVISHING
ALLURE

words by Alexandra Pecci

IT MAY HAPPEN AS YOU SWAY

languidly on a crisp white hammock that's strung between two coconut palm trees, or while a massage therapist lavishes your skin with warm scented oil during a Balinese-style body treatment.

It could happen as you bury your toes into the powder-soft Bahamian sand and sip a ginger-infused margarita, or as you glide past rows of blooming bougainvilleas on a seaside bicycle ride.

Wherever it happens, though, it's inevitable – a blissful surrender to complete relaxation at One&Only Ocean Club Bahamas, nestled on the alluring and aptly named Paradise Island.

Set on 34 immaculate acres of meandering tropical paths, manicured gardens and expansive green lawns, One&Only Ocean Club, a member of The Leading Hotels of The World and a partner of Virtuoso, is a favorite with jet-setters and celebrities like Oprah Winfrey, Michael Jordan and Cindy Crawford, who was married there.

With only 105 guest rooms, suites and private villas, this ravishing resort still feels like the secluded private estate – fittingly dubbed Shangri-La – that it was in the mid-20th century. Even when the hotel is full, it's remarkably quiet and serene.

The refined glamour of One&Only Ocean Club is evident from the moment your car pulls into the gated entrance and winds up the sweeping driveway towards the resort's main Colonial manor house.

Guests are greeted with a celebratory ring of a bronze bell that hangs from the house's plantation-style porch and welcomed with a glass of switcha, a sweet Bahamian lemonade, before being shown to their accommodations.

Guest rooms, like the ground-level rooms in the Crescent Wing, are airy and elegant, with wooden louvered doors that slide open onto private patios on the edge of a wide lawn with sigh-inducing ocean views.

If you're too eager to explore before even unpacking, leave that task to your butler, who's available 24 hours a day with the push of a telephone button to do everything need from poolside dining to sundowner cocktails.

Resorting to luxury
As the sun sets over this exquisite resort, guests dine in style at Dune, by leading chef Jean-Georges Vongerichten, then retire to luxurious accommodations.

from arrange transport, make restaurant or spa reservations, have your clothing pressed or bring you selections from the resort's pillow menu

The personalized butler service is just one of the offerings that make One&Only Ocean Club something of a self-contained sanctuary, a paradise within a paradise that caters to guests' every want and need.

At the Versailles Pool, for instance, guests can swim, lounge and enjoy a leisurely lunch of seafood tacos or conch fritters from the Pool Terrace Café. A selection of magazines, sunscreen, board games, popcorn, water and even reading glasses makes the experience even more comfortable.

Those looking for more formal fine dining will find it at Dune, courtesy of acclaimed chef Jean-Georges Vongerichten. Here, French-Asian cuisine is suffused with Bahamian touches in dishes like the delectable steamed shrimp salad or locally caught lobster with curry sauce, fried plantains and bok choy.

Dune's patio atop a beach bluff is also a spectacular place to start the day. Get up in time for sunrise and then indulge in the delicious Dune Breakfast: eggs Benedict with potato galette, French toast, smoked salmon and a pot of strong coffee.

History, architecture and horticulture lovers will relish a stroll through the Versailles Garden, an intricately landscaped collection of tiered gardens where a lily pond, fountains and marble and bronze statues recall the grounds at the Palace de Versailles. A stunning 12th-century Augustinian cloister, originally from France and reassembled on site, crowns the garden.

Guests can stay active at the resort's well-equipped fitness center, where they'll not only find treadmills, elliptical machines, Pilates equipment and outdoor free weights, but also personal training services.

Complimentary bicycles – including bikes for kids and ones equipped with baby seats – are available to borrow for freewheeling around the resort and Paradise Island.

There are also six Har-Tru tennis courts and private lessons available from onsite pros, plus complimentary yoga classes offered each morning on the main beach deck overlooking the ocean.

Relaxation, of course, is a given here, thanks to Paradise Island's beaches and beautiful weather, but One&Only Ocean Club guests can also indulge at the One&Only Spa.

Eight intricately decorated Balinese-style treatment villas – complete with outdoor day beds and spa tubs – offer guests a private and luxurious place to enjoy massages, facials and other body treatments. Massages are available en suite or outdoors overlooking the ocean.

Anything else guests might need is anticipated, too. There's shopping, thanks to NEO, a boutique featuring designer resort wear and accessories; a salon with hair and nail services; original artwork throughout the resort by local artist Jane Waterous; and plenty for children to do, thanks to a kids' pool, KidsOnly club and babysitting services.

Although it's certainly possible to lose yourself within One&Only Ocean Club's serene grounds and beach for the duration of your stay, Paradise Island is also packed with activities.

On the island's east end is the spectacular 18-hole, par-72, Tom Weiskopf-designed Ocean Club Golf Course, which is open to One&Only Ocean Club guests. Also nearby are luxury homes at the Ocean Club Residences and Marina and the Ocean Club Estates.

At the other end of the island is the popular Atlantis Paradise Island Resort, where visitors will find a casino, water park, upscale restaurants and a marine habitat as well as snorkeling, diving and yacht charters.

One&Only Ocean Club guests enjoy access to the entire Atlantis complex and complimentary transport between the two resorts. Just over the bridge from Paradise Island is Nassau and its bustling Junkanoo Beach, popular fish fry and downtown shopping.

If there are any niggles, they are small. The Wi-Fi can be spotty at times, and occasionally odors from the island's nearby municipal facility are evident. But these issues fade compared to the resort's exquisite beauty and extraordinary level of service.

From the champagne and strawberries delivered to your guestroom every afternoon, to the thoughtful notes from your butler, to the long stretch of quiet beach, nothing says Bahamian luxury and relaxation quite like One&Only Ocean Club. OH

GLOBAL IS THE DIFFERENCE

COHASSET HARBOR, BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS

The Oaks, a private 9.41 acre peninsula with 112' deep water dock, is New England's finest waterfront estate. Located 25+/- miles south of Boston, the magnificent 20,000+/- square foot Georgian Revival mansion is renovated to the highest standards and offers both grand reception rooms and comfortable family living spaces. Panoramic water views can be enjoyed from almost all rooms in the home and from all vantage points around the beautifully manicured grounds. A private sandy beach, tennis court, swimming pool, skating pond with pond house, and children's games lawn create the ultimate family resort and waterfront living experience. This historically significant estate has been home to Clarence W. Barron and family (owners of Dow Jones Company, the Wall Street Journal and Barron's Weekly) for 60 years, and to the current owners for the past 25 years. This is truly a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity! $18,900,000

A SINGULAR OCEANFRONT RESIDENCE ALONG THE DUNES OF WATER MILL

Water Mill. A new significant modern residence has come to market on 1.5 acres above the dunes of Water Mill along 180+ ft of bulk headed ocean front. A masterful collaboration between Steven Harris Architects, Taconic Builders, Rees Robert Interior Designs and Edmund D Hollander Landscape Design for exacting owners has resulted in the recent completion of a 3,500 SF+/-, 4 bedroom, modern stone edifice with unobstructed vistas looking out across both the Atlantic Ocean and Mecox Bay. Walls of glass, some of which recede hydraulically into the floors bringing the outside in, afford views of both the sunrise to the south over the ocean as well as the sunset to the north over the bay. The beautifully realized kitchen anchors an open floor plan that includes living room with fireplace, media room and dining area all looking out to a vast liquid backdrop. The master wing to the east features sleeping chamber with fireplace, sumptuous master bath and ample built in closets. Two bedrooms with baths ensuite plus a separate guest wing on the west, that closes off to the rest of the house, are wonderfully spaced to afford privacy. Radiant heat warms all the floors while superb finishes are evident throughout. State of the art systems include geothermal HVAC system, automatic shades, Lutron lighting and a Savant automation system which can be set up to monitor and control the house from anywhere. A garage below can accommodate two vehicles. Outside the 50' infinity edge pool is serviced by a unique 600 SF pool house with fireplace, cabana kitchen and a grotto below offering underwater views into the pool. Call for your own private preview today in order to be in early for Summer 2015.

THE HOUSE OF CAPONE

If only these walls could talk. Once home to Al Capone, one of America's most notorious gangsters, this beguiling waterfront home in Miami Beach, Fla., has been restored to its former glory following an extensive restoration project by MB America, the property investment company that also bought the mansion on behalf of a private investor. Capone purchased the estate on Palm Island in 1928, during the height of Prohibition, and lived here (aside from an 11-year prison sentence) until his death in 1947. The Colonial-style, seven-bedroom mansion comprises three houses: a gatehouse, main villa and pool cabana. The new owner bought it for more than $8 million, and has spent an additional $1.8 million on ongoing renovations, according to Marco Bruzzi, cofounder and CEO of MB America. With its graceful arches, palm trees and pool, the mansion utterly belies its checkered past, and is now available for video and photo shoots. Tony Soprano would have loved it.
